

Francisca Antman, Professor

PhD, Stanford University, 2007

FIELDS

Economic Development • Labor Economics • Public Economics

CURRENT RESEARCH INTERESTS

International migration and human capital investments; income inequality; poverty traps; adult children's care for elderly parents; economic mobility of individuals and families over time and generations; allocation of resources within households and families; endogeneity of race and ethnicity; economic development in historical perspective.

SELECTED WORKS

"When Beer is Safer than Water: Beer Availability and Mortality from Waterborne Illnesses," (with James M. Flynn) Journal of Development Economics, conditionally accepted.

Journal of the European Economic Association, forthcoming.

"For Want of a Cup: The Rise of Tea in England and the Impact of Water Quality on Mortality," Review of Economics and Statistics, forthcoming

"The Long-Run Impacts of Mexican American School Desegregation," (with Kalena E. Cortes) Journal of Economic Literature, 61 (3): 888-905, September 2023.

"Hispanic Americans in the Labor Market: Patterns Over Time and Across Generations," (with Brian Duncan and Stephen J. Trejo) Journal of Economic Perspectives, 37(1): 169-198, February 2023.

"The Long-Run Impacts of Mexican-American School Desegregation," (with Kalena E. Cortes) Journal of Economic Literature, accepted.

"For Want of a Cup: The Rise of Tea in England and the Impact of Water Quality on Mortality," Review of Economics and Statistics, accepted.

"Multi-Dimensional Identities of the Hispanic Population in the United States," in Advancing Anti-racist Economic Research and Policy. Economic Policy Institute Perspectives and Resources on Race, Ethnicity, and the Economy, June 2022.